to make it more convincing for player to believe it's Sa having meltdown instead of it being an evil contract. Sa will have his ex-colleague who brings the contract read what's on page 7 or 8. His colleague would read a perfect normal police contract to him. and Sa would realize it's his brain doing weird thing.

Here is what Page 7 actually says. Corvos would read this aloud, sounding like a guy who has read a hundred of these NDAs and is completely unfazed.

SECTION 7.1: ASSUMPTION OF LIABILITY AND ASSET TRANSPORT The Subcontractor agrees to facilitate the localized mobility of the IPHA unit within active perimeters. The IPHA unit operates as the primary investigatory framework. The Subcontractor functions as the secondary mobile support. The Subcontractor assumes full liability for any physical damage to the IPHA unit resulting from negligent transport or failure to adhere to spatial awareness protocols.

SECTION 7.2: CHASSIS INTEGRITY AND FLUID MAINTENANCE The Subcontractor is strictly prohibited from tampering with the IPHA unit's hermetically sealed chassis. The Subcontractor must ensure the external casing remains uncompromised. Any structural breach resulting in the loss of internal thermoregulation fluids, coolant, or proprietary chemical suspension will result in immediate financial penalties. The Subcontractor must not attempt unauthorized repairs or handle the internal components.

SECTION 7.3: PROTOCOL COMPLIANCE AND TERMINATION Failure to adhere to the operational directives issued by the IPHA unit constitutes a breach of contract. The Subcontractor must submit to all standard procedural audits. Continued employment and medical benefit subsidization are entirely contingent upon strict compliance with SID parameters.

The Contrast: Look at how the hallucination perfectly translates the boring reality into a nightmare:

- Reality: "The Subcontractor functions as the secondary mobile support." -> Sa's Brain: "You are the tether. You will pull the monument."

- Reality: "Loss of internal thermoregulation fluids, coolant, or proprietary chemical suspension." -> Sa's Brain: "The brine must not dry. The salt must not leak."
- Reality: "The Subcontractor must submit to all standard procedural audits." -> Sa's Brain: "SUBMIT SUBMIT SUBMIT .

The Interaction (How it looks in-game):

1. Sa is staring at the tablet. The screen is filled with the aggressive  blocks and the word SUBMIT flashing at him. He is sweating, his vision is swimming, and he finally snaps.
2. He shoves the tablet at Corvos, pointing at the screen, saying something like, "What the hell is this garbage? It's literally just static and threats."
3. Corvos takes the tablet. He looks at Page 7. He looks back at Sa, confused. He clears his throat and reads Section 7.2 out loud in a completely flat, unimpressed voice: "The Subcontractor is strictly prohibited from tampering with the IPHA unit's hermetically sealed chassis..."
4. Corvos turns the tablet back around to show Sa.
5. 玩家可以选择是否再次阅读，如果再次阅读的话，tablet上就是正常的内容。

如果Sa拒绝签字：

1. The Abort Instinct (Flight)

Right after Corvos reads the perfectly normal text, Sa's immediate reaction should be pure rejection.

- The Action: He shoves the tablet back at Corvos. He takes a physical step backward, creating distance between himself and the "trap."
- The Dialogue: "Yeah, alright. I'm not doing this. Keep the tablet, keep the drone. I'll find my own gigs."

2. The Anchor (The Insurance)

As he turns to leave or steps away, his physical reality has to remind him why he's there.

- The Action: He aggressively rubs his eyes to clear the static, but the movement makes him wince. Have him unconsciously grab a lingering physical injury—a bruised rib, a bad shoulder, something he needs the SID medical insurance to fix.

- The Vibe: He realizes his body is failing. He needs the baseline medical coverage just to survive the week. Function dictates he cannot walk away.

3. The Tactical Override (Keeping the Threat Close)

He stops. He looks back at Corvos. This is where the paranoia kicks in.

- The Action: He stares at Corvos, sizing him up. He realizes that if the cops are already watching him, turning down a government contract right now makes him a massive red flag. He needs to know what SID knows about him.
- The Dialogue (Deflection): He masks his panic with typical ESTP bravado. He drops the fear and pivots to treating it like a transactional annoyance.
 - "Actually, you know what? Fine. If the Sunk wants to pay for my medical while I babysit their glorified roomba, whatever."
