The Paper-Thin Freedom

Ulises's signature on that "mostly cured" evaluation was a bureaucratic miracle. In a system as overloaded as the public asylum, a first-year practitioner's sign-off likely just slipped through the automated approval cracks because the administration was desperate for an empty bed.

Sa was discharged to the streets. He still owes the city the crippling medical debt for those 3 years of care, but he is legally free. The entire foundation of his PI license, his freedom, and his access to Premium O2 rests on that single piece of paper signed by Ulises.

The Weaponized Audit

Ipha-P doesn't need to kidnap Sa or leak his secrets to the press. They just need to trigger a "Medical Fitness Discrepancy" report.

1. The Whistleblower Flag: Ipha-P submits an anonymous inquiry to the Licensing Board, pointing out an anomaly in Sa's file: his mandatory psychological clearance was signed by a junior practitioner with no authority to override a 10-year containment sentence.
2. The Presumption of Fraud: To the Board, this doesn't look like a miracle recovery. It looks like a first-year doctor was bribed, intimidated, or dangerously negligent.

The "Data-Lock" Execution

Because The Sunk is built on automated liability, the bureaucracy reacts instantly to protect itself from a potential lawsuit.

- The Automatic Freeze: The moment the Board receives the inquiry, they place a "Data-Lock" on Sa's PI license. The logic is simple: if his medical clearance was falsified, his PI license was issued under false pretenses. He is instantly suspended pending an independent review.
- The Trap: The Board demands Sa submit to a new, independent medical assessment by a senior city-appointed physician to verify Ulises's original diagnosis.

The Double-Bind

This is why Ipha-P's threat is a checkmate. Sa is trapped between two impossible outcomes:

1. Submit to the Exam: If Sa actually sits down for an independent medical assessment, the senior doctor will immediately see the lingering TBI effects, the severe neuropathic pain, and the throttled artificial heart. They will rule that Ulises lied. Sa will be sent straight back to the asylum, and his license will be permanently revoked.
2. Refuse the Exam: If Sa refuses the assessment, the Data-Lock becomes permanent. He can't work. If he can't work, he defaults on his asylum debt and his heart maintenance, and he slowly suffocates in his own freezing apartment.

Plus, there is the Ulises Factor. If the Board rules that the original evaluation was fake, Ulises loses his medical license and likely goes to prison for endangering the public by releasing a violent patient. Ipha-P is using Sa's physical survival and Ulises's life as leverage.
