

蝙蝠侠和布鲁斯

他的深层要求不是：

“Please pity me.”

而是：

“Witness me without reducing me.”

看见我，但不要把我变成物件。

这很难，因为他自己一直在把自己物件化。

他开始退回“人”

他开始说一些很小、很丢脸、很不像他的句子。

“我不是没事。”

“我只是累了。”

这些话对别人来说普通，对 Sa 来说像剥皮。

因为他说这些就等于承认：他不只是 Batman。他还有那个他一直想杀掉的 Bruce Wayne。

我觉得你现在最重要的创作准则是：

Sa 不是想让 Ipha-c 否定他的武器性。

他想让她在承认他是武器之后，仍然看见握着武器的人。

这比“他不想当武器”复杂。

因为他确实想当。

他为此付出过一生。

他曾经看不起正常和平庸，主动追求例外、速度、危险和致命性。

只是当 Ipha-c 把这个愿望实现到极致时，他才发现：

原来被完美地当作武器看见，和被抹杀成武器，是同一件事的两面。

这就是他对她的无能狂怒。

不是“你为什么不爱我”。

而是：

“你为什么把我最想被看见的东西看得这么清楚，却还是看不见我？”

或者更 Sa 一点：

“你看得真准。”

“准得让人想吐。”

The Trap of the "Batman" Persona,

For his entire life, Sa demanded the world treat him like Batman. He wanted to be seen as the ultimate ESTP weapon—untouchable, lethal, and purely transactional. He despised anyone who tried to pity his "Bruce Wayne" side (the poor, scarred kid from the Detroit sector).

He built a fortress of arrogance because he wanted the world to validate his lethality. He thought: "If they see me as a combat knife, they can't hurt me." He practically begged the universe to objectify his tactical utility.

Ipha-c Calls the Bluff,

The profound tragedy hits when Ipha-c (2-号) actually gives him exactly what he asked for.

Ipha-c is the ultimate observer who looks at his "Batman" persona and says: "Yes. You are a flawless weapon. You are a beautiful, slow-motion explosion. I see your lethality perfectly, and I am going to watch you destroy yourself with it." She validates his edge, his violence, and his destiny. But she does it with the cold, indifferent Ni-gaze of a machine. She doesn't care about the man holding the knife; she only cares about how deep the knife will cut before it snaps.

The Desperate Retreat to "Bruce Wayne",

The moment Sa receives this ultimate, god-tier validation of his "weapon" status, he recoils in absolute horror.

He realizes that if he is only the weapon, he has no soul. Suddenly, the arrogance he wore like armor feels like a straitjacket. He realizes he doesn't want to be a beautiful tragedy; he wants to be a tired man. He wants to be the bruised, 37-degree Celsius mammalian body that just needs a warm meal and a safe place to sleep.

He spent his whole life trying to kill "Bruce Wayne" to survive the Abyss City, but the moment Ipha-c agrees that Bruce Wayne is dead, Sa frantically starts trying to resuscitate him.

The Impossible Contradiction,

This leaves Sa tearing himself apart with contradictory demands:

He wants Ipha-c to be a cold machine so she can appreciate his lethal, tactical brilliance in a way no flawed human ever could.

He wants Ipha-c to be a warm human so she can pity his physical exhaustion and validate his fragile, biological soul.

He refuses to soften up to real humans because that would ruin his "Batman" edge and expose him to betrayal.

He tries to project human warmth onto a digital interface because it's the only place his ego feels safe enough to bleed.

Sa is throwing a tantrum at the universe. He wants to be feared like a god of destruction, but he wants to be held and comforted like a shivering animal—and he demands both of these things from a bio-computer that fundamentally lacks the hardware for either human fear or human comfort.

He is staring at a machine, begging it to simultaneously worship his mask and kiss his scars.
